

AIDING THE AGING

The prostate is a gland which can serve as an indicator of men's general well-being and is an accurate snapshot of hormonal and cellular health.

PREVALENT PROSTATE PROBLEMS

The prostate gland is often neglected and only seems to get focus when it is not functioning properly, which is likely to occur with age. Most problems with the prostate begin after age 50. Prostate cancer is the most common form of cancer in men, but thankfully, it can usually be treated successfully. A more common problem is benign prostate enlargement. In fact, the probability of developing an enlarged prostate is the percentage equal to the man's age, (i.e. 50% of 50 year old men or 80% of 80 year old men have benign enlargement). In this condition, the prostate grows larger than it should and can cause discomfort and difficulty with elimination.

Therefore, it is important to support prostate health as one gets older. The ideal method to do so is through consumption of nutrients and botanicals that support the prostate, hormonal and cellular health of the whole man.
